Abstract: In May 1850, four members – reflecting Milwaukee’s Germanic influence – organized the Milwaukee Musical Society. Within two years, membership had climbed above 200 members. This amateur group was initially directed by Austrian political refugee Hans Balatka until he left for Chicago in 1860. The group’s early years were marred by internal squabbles, financial problems and a fire that destroyed much of the club’s sheet music and instruments. But during the 1870s famed Milwaukee conductor Eugene Luening became director and presided over the club for 25 years. The group finally disbanded in 1940.

Scope and Content: The collection consists of correspondence, programs, meeting minutes, reports, financial reports, newspaper clippings, and membership lists.

Language: German, English

Notes: The collection was processed by Nicholas Neylon, January 1992. Material was added by Steve Daily, Aug. 1998, and Steve Schaffer, Sept. 2016.
